

Message from the Director

Trust is an interesting and perplexing concept. Investing your trust in a relationship, business or personal, is an investment that creates vulnerability. Vulnerability can open doors that might otherwise be left sealed or invisible. But what is trust?

Merriam-Webster's Learner's Dictionary (because we are life-long learners) defines it this way:

a: assured reliance on the character, ability, strength, or truth of someone or something.

1: Belief that someone or something is reliable, good, honest, effective, etc.

There are many ways to define trust. We can all think of examples of experiences that defined our behaviors in regards to our willingness to trust. At work we often have the need, regardless of the desire, to trust others in order to move projects and goals forward for the organization.

This same need plays into our family and community successes. Charles Feltman described trust as, "... Choosing to risk making something you value vulnerable to another person's actions." We can't do everything ourselves. We can't learn everything in the time given us each day. It is imperative that we make ourselves vulnerable to the actions of others sometimes; that we trust our co-workers, our friends, our families, and others.

To quote a few intellectuals and scholars on how trust improves our lives:

"We're never so vulnerable than when we trust someone- but paradoxically, if we cannot trust, neither can we find love or joy."

~Walter Anderson

"You must trust and believe in people or life becomes impossible."

~ Anton Chekov

We are one community, one county. We are stronger and more effective together. Through building trusting relationships and working together we can accomplish things, learn skills, and succeed in ways that we could not on our own. I believe that one way to develop trust is to build relationships with those people in your life that are "... reliable, good, honest, effective..."

@ Your Library, we strive to make a difference in our community and in your lives. We hope you will join us as we all look for the good, find the positive, allow for the human factor, and support each other. We live in one of the most beautiful, friendly, giving places I have ever experienced. And you can trust me on that!

Britton Lund, Director
Washington County Library System

Summer Reading Sponsors

The Washington County Library System is proud to once again present a summer reading program for children and teens in the community. This is an important program, encouraging our area youth to read and enjoy the many benefits that the library offers over the course of the summer. This year, we expect a record number of participants.

We will be offering special events throughout the summer and special incentives for reading at all seven branches of the Library System. This has been made possible by the generous contributions that we have received from our sponsors. The support that is offered to the Library System by our sponsors fills a gap that has been created by budget constraints, and allows the Library System to provide a high quality reading program to the youth in our area.

Why is it so important to encourage summer reading?

Reading throughout the summer benefits students; it helps them to retain skills learned during the school year. A recent study shows that one in four children grow up not knowing how to read. Many people consider literacy issues as personal concerns that affect the illiterate individual and not society as a whole.

In reality, literacy issues are a collective concern that affects the quality and prosperity of our entire nation. The struggle to win the battle of literacy in America is one which should be fought by everyone. Low literacy costs $73 million per year in terms of direct costs, and the indirect costs may be staggering.

We would like to thank our sponsors for their vision in assisting the Library System in providing opportunities for the youth in our area to improve and increase their literacy skills. They are investing in the future of our youth, our community, and our society.

June Green Tip

Saving money on energy bills this summer can be fun as well as easy! Grill outside twice a week, and you could shave 15% off your electric bill. Heating the house by using the stove or oven makes your air conditioning run harder and longer to compensate for the heated air that is generated by cooking in the house. What a tasty way to save money on utilities!
